Library District to Launch Public Computing Center

On Monday, September 27, at 10:30 a.m., the Poughkeepsie Public Library District will launch its new Public Computer Center (PCC). We hope you will be able to join us for this brief but significant ceremony that will mark a major expansion of the Library District's services to the people of Poughkeepsie.

This is part of a project titled Broadbandexpress@yourlibrary, which is designed to expand computer access in public libraries across New York State. Our PCC here in Poughkeepsie will help low-income, unemployed, underemployed, or other vulnerable populations, to locate and prepare for new employment opportunities. The Library District is one of only 30 public libraries in the state to be selected as a recipient of a $250,000 federal American Recovery and Reinvestment (ARRA) grant.

We hope you will be able to join us, along with New York State Regent Harry Phillips, local officials, and other dignitaries, for this exciting moment in the history of our Library District and our community.

The Poughkeepsie Public Library District: We have what you're looking for.
