

Collaborative Efforts Help

The collaborative effort between the Adult Literacy of Northern New York and the Potsdam Public Computer Center helped Aziza Islam improve her English speaking and digital literacy skills and to find employment. (L-Rene Austin, Potsdam Computer Center Director, Aziza Islam and Barbara Gordon, St. Lawrence County Literacy of Northern New York Coordinator). Both agencies were reactivated or established through grants obtained by the Potsdam Public Library through North Country Library System and the Department of Library Development and are located in the library.

Michael Thurber of Potsdam worked hard in the St. Lawrence County Literacy of Northern New York program, which is housed in the Potsdam Public Library, to improve his reading, writing and math skills. As a result, he was able to earn his high school equivalency diploma and has been accepted for admission to North Country Community College.
